Sidney Hsu

“about”>

As a design major in college and graduate school, at first I studied graphic design, but then I started to work on product design and user experience. Now my focus is on full-stack web development, which has also become part of my expertise.

In addition, I’m good at identifying problems and proposing solutions through design thinking. I not only have a strong passion for design, but I also have gained a lot of experiences of interdisciplinary cooperation. Interacting with people and learning knowledge of different areas are something I enjoy. It is my belief that by combining what I’ve learned and experienced, I definitely can create higher and greater value to any product.
